Emily Dickinson International Society
Annual Meeting

Dickinson in Her Elements

August 7 - 9, 2015
Amherst, Massachusetts

In collaboration with the Emily Dickinson Museum
Welcome to Amherst!

In collaboration with the Emily Dickinson Museum, The Emily Dickinson International Society 2015 Annual Meeting presents “Dickinson in Her Elements,” a variety of programs inspired by the poet’s engagements with air, earth, fire, and water. In addition to the Critical Institute, in which participants will share essays in progress, we’re offering workshops on poems in which Dickinson turns her acute attentions to worldly elements. Besides being treated to some wonderfully informative and engaging talks by exciting scholars, we’ll also get to experience The Red Skies Music Ensemble (on Friday evening) and jazz pianist Tomoko Ozawa playing Martha Dickinson Bianchi’s Steinway in the Evergreens (on Saturday afternoon). Also on the schedule are nature hikes, a visit to the Amherst College Wilder Observatory, a program on Dickinson’s grounds, and more. Be prepared for a delightful variety of elemental matters—bird-watching, star-gazing, cloud musing, ruminating botanically, thinking about slow geologic change, and congregating with other Dickinson and poetry enthusiasts from all over the world.

12:15-1:30 PM  Boxed Lunch
Pick up at Alumni House

1:30-4:30 PM  EDIS Critical Institute
Robert Frost Library
The Dickinson Institute provides an opportunity for participants to workshop critical essays and conference papers that are in some way related to the topic of the Annual Meeting, “Dickinson in her Elements.” Applicants submitted proposals for papers about Dickinson’s writings in relation to the physical sciences (botany, geology, astronomy, etc.), agriculture, natural and built environments, etc. Participants meet to discuss these pre-circulated papers in a small group setting with a discussion leader (leaders include: Christopher Benfey, Michelle Kohler, Mary Loeffelholz, Eliza Richards, Karen Sanchez-Eppler, and Alex Socarides).

Participants include: Karen Leona Anderson, Faith Barrett, Renée Bergland, Lucy Diamond Biederman, Jillian Caddell, Paul Crumbley, Danielle Davis, Leslie Eckel, Paraísa Finnerty, Ben Gillespie, Sharon Hamilton, Eri Kubota, Hsu Li-hsin, Eleanor Linafelt, Xiaohui Liu, Karah Mitchell, Clare Mullaney, Amy Nestor, Marianne Noble, Nicole Panizza, Grant Rosson, Aiya Sakr, Jefferey Simons, Mary Traester, Renee Walker, Cheryl Weaver, Joan Wry.

4:45-5:15 PM  Reflections on Critical Institute
Alumni House Main Room
All Institute members (and non-members who are interested) will meet to discuss the kinds of knowledge and work that this year’s institute has made possible.

1:30-3:00 PM  Poetry Workshop: Earth
Alumni House Library
“Earth” is a planet, a place where life is rooted; “earth” is soil, ground for growth, burial, new life. Pairing “Four Trees – upon a solitary / Acre” with “By my Window have / I for scenery” will invite discussion of historical and contemporary perspectives of the natural world, raising questions of what “nature poetry” is, and what it has come to mean to readers today facing our planetary environmental crisis. These two poems, along with “I reason – / Earth is short,” which appears in one version in a fascicle and another in the correspondence to Susan Dickinson, will lead to consideration of prosodic strategies, including lineation, in addition to issues of perception, order, randomness, design and absence of design, reason and emotion, faith and doubt.
Discussions Leaders: Martha Nell Smith, Ellen Louise Hart
“Four Trees – upon a solitary / Acre” (Fr 778)
“By my Window have / I for Scenery” (Fr 849)
“I reason – / Earth is short” (Fr 403A)
1:30-3:00 PM  Museum Activity: Water
Beneski Museum of Natural History
Edward Hitchcock, Lake Hitchcock and Geologic Change
Water has shaped the Connecticut River valley from the beginning. Join Beneski Museum educator Alfred J. Venne as he helps participants explore Edward Hitchcock’s understanding of the ever-changing landscape of the Connecticut River Valley. We will consider the earliest lakes that formed as the valley was created, the mile high continental glaciers and glacial lakes that sculpted the area and the meandering river of today.

3:30-5:00 PM  Poetry Workshop: Fire
Alumni House Library
As for any good child of the Romantic era, Dickinson’s fires are both destructive and creative, and the poems are now an exhilarating attempt at recording the full flare of it, now a depressive report of the blasted result after everything has been burnt to the ground. Dickinson’s poetic fires often burn low, hidden under the surface of an apparently calm poetic diction, but they are unstoppable—“You cannot put a Fire out,” she avers, because fire is the force of life itself—fueled by air and similar to water (F 583). Whether it blazes or smoulders, pours out of volcanoes or strikes the ground like lightning, it reshapes the world according to the poet’s fiery imagination.

Discussion Leaders: Elizabeth Petrino, Antoine Cazé
“A still – Volcano – life” (Fr 517)
“To pile like Thunder to it’s close” (Fr 1353)

5:30-7:30 PM  Reception and Banquet

Valentine Hall, Amherst College

8:00 PM  Red Skies Music Ensemble
Friedmann Room
Campus Center, Amherst College

Emily Dickinson in her Elements: Accomplished Musician, Emerging Poet
Combining the music Emily played and loved, along with an illustrated narrative and theatrical presentation of her own wit and commentaries from correspondence and poetry, The Red Skies Music Ensemble delivers an entertaining and vivid portrayal of Dickinson in her elements of music, nature, Amherst and New England. George Božičević, Curator and Musical Director; Trudy Williams, Artistic Director.

Emily Dickinson in New Fiction
Moderated by Jonnie Guerra
Alumni House Main Room
Nuala O’Connor, Miss Emily
Born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1970, Nuala O’Connor is a fiction writer and poet. Writing as Nuala Ní Chonchúir she has published two novels, four collections of short fiction, a chapbook of flash fiction and three full poetry collections—one in an anthology. Nuala’s third novel, Miss Emily, was published by Penguin Random House in July 2015. Nuala holds a BA in Irish from Trinity College Dublin and a Masters in Translation Studies (Irish/English) from Dublin City University. She has worked as an arts administrator in theatre and in a writers’ centre; as a translator, a creative writing instructor, and as a bookseller.

Susan Snively, The Heart Has Many Doors: A Novel of Emily Dickinson
Susan Snively grew up in Louisville, Kentucky, and lives in New England where she is a guide, discussion leader, and film script writer for the Emily Dickinson Museum. She was the founder and first director of the Writing Center at Amherst College, where she worked from 1981 until 2008. She has published four collections of poems: From This Distance (1981), Voices in the House (1988), The Undertow (1998), and Skeptic Traveler (2005.) Snively has received numerous prizes and awards for her writing, and continues to lecture and give readings. Most recently, she published The Heart Has Many Doors, a novel about the love affair between Emily Dickinson and Judge Otis Phillips Lord. She is the screenwriter and narrator of two documentary films on Dickinson: “Seeing New Englandly” (2010) and “My Business is to Sing” (2012), co-produced with Ernest Urvater.
1:30-3:00 PM
Poetry Workshop: Air
Alumni House Library

Dickinson’s figurations for “Air” are wrapped in her usual paradoxes and complexities: Air in the physical sense is almost a negative—it is invisible and neutral, but, when blown into storms, it is also wrenching, destructive, and alarming. It is “beloved,” “crowded,” even “autocratic”—and most important, it is necessary; some of Dickinson’s most haunting poems are those of entombment and suffocation. In some poems “Air” is, continuing the physical senses, “Ether,” “Wind,” “Breeze,” whatever is in a balloon. Matter and manner merge when her metrics, her gaps imitate the deprivations that are the focus of the poem.

Discussion Leaders: Dan Manheim, Eleanor Heginbotham

“I breathed enough to take the Trick” (Fr 308)

“Without this – there is nought” (Fr 464)

3:30-5:00 PM
Poetry Workshop: Water
Alumni House Main Room

Water workshop will begin with “I started early, took my dog” (F656/J520), and “Have you got a brook in your little heart” (F94/J136), to focus on several variations in water as applied by Emily Dickinson. We will explore the symbolism of water in these poems, and how differences between them, as well as the contradistinction in tone within each poem, can affect our understanding of the function of water in the poems. Participants are encouraged to toss into the discussion their choices of poems where water is a significant piece in a Dickinson riddle.

Discussion Leaders: James Guthrie, Lois Kackley

“Water, is taught by thirst” (Fr 93)

“I started early – Took my Dog” (Fr 656)

Museum Activity: Air
Beneski Museum of Natural History

“She sights a Bird – she chuckles”: Birds in 19th-century Amherst

Dickinson made numerous mentions of bird species in her work, and the poet herself lived during the height of natural history study and collecting in the United States. Beneski Museum Curator Kate Wellspring will present bird specimens collected during Dickinson’s lifetime, with a focus on species that are mentioned by the poet, as well as species that she would have been likely to have seen in her own gardens and fields.

5:00 PM
Tomoko Ozawa, jazz pianist
The Evergreens

Ozawa began studying classical piano at the age of six and spent three years in England studying under Belinda Mikhail and Vanessa Latarche. While studying political science and international law at International Christian University in Tokyo, she became fascinated with Jazz and motivated to find her own voice in music. In 2011, Ozawa relocated to Boston, Massachusetts, to study at Berklee College of Music under Vadim Neselovskyi and Alain Mallet. Studying classical composition under Apostolos Paraskevas inspired her to set the poetry of Emily Dickinson to music, which is now a main theme in her work. She formed the Tomoko Ozawa group with fellow musicians from Berklee, and began performing in Boston. Ozawa is currently a piano accompanist at Boston Conservatory, Jose Mateo Ballet Theatre and Dance Complex, band leader of “Tomoko Ozawa Quintet” and a pianist in “Collective Septet.”
